Therefore an anthropology of technology is not a separate, discrete inquiry; instead, it is a way to connect how people make and use things to any activity studied, ranging from religion, to enculturation, to communication, to art. Each contributor discusses theories and methods and also offers a substantial case study. Anthropological perspectives and methodologies can offer developers significant contextual understanding of stakeholders'

worlds and how they are affected by their technology. Often this involves drawing out the nuances in values and behaviours that sit outside a development team's direct personal experience.
