I'm Beatrice Kennedy, but everyone calls me Beat. I live a low-key life, fresh out of college and drifting from town to town until I find my home. I love music, and how it stirs even the deepest and untouched parts of your soul. Depending on what you choose to listen to, would depend on what it touches. It's the drug we all dumper in, only different strains. My strain is Jazz. The smooth instrumental strums that take over me. The sound of cigar smoke, bourbon and an old dusty fedora hat. My strain wasn't rap, and it sure wasn't laced with some A-class shit like murky blue eyes casted down from the Lord and the Devil's handcrafted smile. I knew who he was--the whole world did. One fateful night set off a chain of events, events that no one was coming back from. You can't save people who don't want to be saved. You can't pull them up from the ocean when they've latched themselves to an anchor. Love was my anchor, destruction was the water that was drowning me, and the rope that was so tightly clamped around my ankles, was woven with the lyrics of Aeron Romanov-Reed, also known as, 'Manik. He steals hearts from all around the world, but one night, he stole something that wasn't his to steal. Me.

Assembled by Audrey Hepburn's son Luca Dotti, Audrey in Rome is an intimate collection of almost two hundred candid photographs of the beloved actress and much-imitated style icon during the twenty-year period she made Rome her home. A private album of rare snapshots—many never published before—of Audrey Hepburn in her everyday life as a citizen of the Eternal City, Audrey in Rome is a treasure for every fan of her films and her impeccable, timeless style. With an introduction by Dotti that reveals Audrey's private side and three photo-filled chapters organized by decade, the book captures the actress as she strolls around the city alone and with family and friends, walks her Yorkie, Mr. Famous, has breakfast in Piazza Navona, visits the local florist, and more. The book also contains set photographs of the films she made during her Rome years (Roman Holiday, War and Peace, The Nun's Story, Breakfast at Tiffany's) and of the famous clothes and accessories that helped create her iconic look. Irresistible as the actress herself, Audrey in Rome opens the door to Hepburn's personal world.

Most people outside Italy know Pier Paolo Pasolini for his films, many of which began as literary works—Arabian Nights, The Gospel According to Matthew, The Decameron, and The Canterbury Tales among them. What most people are not aware of is that he was primarily a poet, publishing nineteen books of poems during his lifetime, as well as a visual artist, novelist, playwright, and journalist. Half a dozen of these books have been excerpted and published in English over the years, but even if one were to read all of those, the wide range of poetic styles and subjects that occupied Pasolini during his lifetime would still elude the English-language reader. For the first time, Anglophones will now be able to discover the many facets of this singular poet. Avoiding the tactics of the slim, idiosyncratic, and aesthetically or politically motivated volumes currently available in English, Stephen Sartarelli has chosen poems from every period of Pasolini's poetic oeuvre. In doing so, he gives English-language readers a more complete picture of the poet, whose verse ranged from short lyrics to longer poems and extended sequences, and whose themes ran not only to the moral, spiritual, and social spheres but also to the aesthetic and sexual, for which he is most known in the United States today. This volume shows how central poetry was to Pasolini, no matter what else he was doing in his creative life, and how poetry informed all of his work from the visual arts to his political essays to his films. Pier Paolo Pasolini was "a poet of the cinema," as James Ivory says in the book's foreword, who "left a trove of words on paper that can live on as the fast-deteriorating images he created on celluloid cannot." This generous selection of poems will be welcomed by poetry lovers and film buffs alike and will be an event in American letters.

One of the most important Italian poets of the last century, Vittorio Sereni (1913–83) wrote with a historical awareness unlike that of any of his contemporaries. A poet of both personal and political responsibility, his work sensitively explores life under fascism, military defeat and imprisonment, and the resurgence of extreme right-wing politics, as well as the roles played by love and friendship in the survival of humanity. The first substantial translation of Sereni's oeuvre published anywhere in the world, The Selected Poetry and Prose of Vittorio Sereni is a unique guide to this twentieth-century poet. A bilingual edition, reissued in paperback for the poet's centenary, it collects Sereni's poems, criticism, and short fiction with a full chronology, commentary, bibliography, and learned introduction by British poet and scholar Peter Robinson.

August Cotton shouldn't be here. When a tragic accident calls him home to Magnolia Springs, this returned Veteran adds his parents to the list of things he's lost in recent years, right along with his IED detection dog and his left leg. As the sole guardian of his four-year-old sister, August must rely on his Marine training in raising a tiny hellion who's as stubborn as he is. But the Corps could never prepare him for this. Nor could they prepare him for Olivia Anders, a woman who'll stop at nothing to get her way. As owner of Paws for Cause, Olivia is no stranger to the broken men and women who return home from war. She's no stranger to broken dogs either. In fact, she's made it her mission to pair the two and enrich both of their lives, but pairing ornery and aloof August Cotton will take some work. The last thing August wants is some pushy southern woman occupying his parents' bed and breakfast and forcing him to open up about the hell he narrowly escaped, but that's exactly what Olivia intends. They complete one another, and yet they can't stand to be in the same room. Can Olivia make this hardened Marine feel again and finally show his heart the way back home? Intended for a mature 18+ audience only. This book may contain triggers for some readers.

«Non innamorarti di lui... non ancora...». È passato un anno dalla notte tempestosa in cui Benjamin Carter è ripiombato nella vita di Caterina, giurandole amore eterno, per poi andarsene di nuovo, con la promessa di tornare da lei un giorno. Andare avanti non è stato facile, ma non ha avuto altra scelta se non quella di rimboccarsi le maniche e guardare al futuro, un futuro dolce e semplice che solo il bell'avvocato Julian Steinfield sembra essere in grado di offrirle. Ma il destino sembra non volersi arrendere e, ogni volta che Caterina pensa di essere guarita e immune al fascino del suo grande amore perduto, lui rispunta dal nulla, pronto a rimescolare le carte in tavola. Complice un concerto a New York City e un matrimonio al quale non può mancare, i due si ritroveranno l'uno davanti all'altra per la resa dei conti. Questa volta non basteranno promesse vuote e muri invalicabili per difendersi: quando si troveranno davanti al bivio più importante della loro vita, dovranno decidere da che parte andare consapevoli che, una volta imboccata una strada, non si potrà più tornare indietro.

"Mark, il burlone. Mark, il superficiale. Mark, che non prende mai niente sul serio." Mark Carter è, all'apparenza la persona più felice del mondo, sempre sorridente, con la battuta pronta, il bravo-ragazzo, l'amico di tutti, quello educato e razionale. Eppure tutti hanno un lato oscuro, segreti inconfessabili da custodire e paure da affrontare. Mark è il più bravo in assoluto a mascherare i suoi veri sentimenti, finché il dolore diventa troppo forte e il senso di inadeguatezza quasi schiacciante. Ma un incontro inaspettato farà vacillare definitivamente il suo, già precario, equilibrio: Dakota. Lei è pericolosa, sexy e ha tutta l'aria di una che se ne frega del mondo intero. Basterà uno sguardo, un paio di battute al vetriolo e la consapevolezza che niente sarà più come prima dopo averla incontrata per rimettere in discussione tutta la sua vita. Ma se Mark non riesce a vedere la luce in fondo al tunnel, Dakota è consapevole che, per lei, alla fine del tunnel c'è solo un muro spesso fatto di abusi e di dolore. Non può andare avanti e non può tornare indietro. Riuscirà Mark a salvare entrambi o rimarrà coin-

Non è facile essere una Carter in un mondo dove il tuo cognome è la definizione per eccellenza di perfezione e tutti si sentono in diritto di ricordarti di continuo che tuo padre e tuo zio sono state delle leggende locali. Eva odia trovarsi al centro dell'attenzione, odia che le ragazze a scuola cerchino la sua amicizia solo per poter arrivare ai suoi cugini, odia dover subire il terzo grado da suo padre e da tutto il clan dei Carter ogni volta che muove un passo. Soprattutto da quando Jonathan, nemico giurato dei giovani Carter dai tempi delle elementari, ha smesso di guardarla come se fosse solo la bambina che abita in fondo alla strada e ha iniziato a trattarla da donna. Ma se il ragazzo per il quale Eva ha una cotta da sempre è considerato dalla sua famiglia come un prepotente senza speranza, come riuscirà lei, una quindicenne inesperta, a coronare il suo sogno a luci rosa? Winner of the American Political Science Association's 1991 Woodrow Wilson Foundation Book Award for the best book published in the United States during 1990 on government, politics, or international affairs How do ordinary citizens, government officials, opinion leaders, or social scientists attempt to solve social problems? How competent are we at defining the problems, seeking information, and finding answers? In this important and controversial book, a distinguished social scientist meticulously analyzes our attempt to understand society so that we can reshape it. In so doing, he largely bypasses both epistemology and contemporary highly abstract theory on knowledge and society in order to achieve a far more concrete analysis of discourse and inquiry in social problem solving. There is a tragic discrepancy, argues Charles E. Lindblom, between our abilities to solve problems and the difficulty of the problems to be solved. We must make do with inadequate information and inconclusive analyses, for the task is less one of learning the truth than of proceeding in inquiry and decisions when the truth cannot be known. Lindblom discusses the many obstacles that prevent us from solving social problems, focusing in particular on learned incompetence. According to Lindblom, parents teach children not to think certain thoughts, and schools often engage more in indoctrination than education. Political rhetoric and commercial sales promotion feed a steady diet of misrepresentation. Social science does help. But because it is dependent on popular thought, it shares the impairments of thought found in both political figures and ordinary citizens. It also develops its own distinctive impairments and is to a degree crippled by its narrow view of scientific method--often more interested in proving than probing. Although social science can be improved in ways that Lindblom outlines in his book, social inquiry calls for such significant contributions from lay thought that it renders many conventional ideals of scientific problem solving inappropriate. Lindblom contends that the route to better social problem solving is not through either scientific or popular consensus or agreement, however much they are valued in the world of science and social science, but through a competition of ideas. The index of a society's competence, he states, is in its discord over ends, values, or purposes. "As usual, Lindblom cuts through to the core of the issue: How is society to understand its central problems and challenges? With originality and courage, he takes on the social scientists and the policy analysts, and presents an inspiring picture of a self-guiding democracy that continuously deliberates over means and ends. A signal contribution."--Robert B. Reich, Harvard University

The "Gothic" style was a key trend in Italian cinema of the 1950s and 1960s because of its peculiar, often strikingly original approach to the horror genre. These films portrayed Gothic staples in a stylish and idiosyncratic way, and took a daring approach to the supernatural and to eroticism, with the presence of menacing yet seductive female witches, vampires and ghosts. Thanks to such filmmakers as Mario Bava (Black Sunday), Riccardo Freda (The Horrible Dr. Hichcock), and Antonio Margheriti (Castle of Blood), as well the iconic presence of actress Barbara Steele, Italian Gothic horror went overseas and reached cult status. The book examines the Italian Gothic horror of the period, with an abundance of previously unpublished production information drawn from official papers and original scripts. Entries include a complete cast and crew list, home video releases, plot summary and the author's analysis. Excerpts from interviews with filmmakers, scriptwriters and actors are included. The foreword is by film director and scriptwriter Ernesto Gastaldi.

Esperanto, spoken by thousands of people across the world, is the most successful international language project. In this book, the French linguist and literary critic Pierre Janton describes the history of Esperanto since its invention in nineteenth-century Eastern Europe and offers a comprehensive linguistic description of the language. This book is the best general introduction to Esperanto and its role in the modern world. Rooted in the populism and internationalism of the late nineteenth century, Esperanto owes its origins in part to western European educational currents and in part to the cultural history of eastern European Jewry. It is a fascinating historical and sociological phenomenon as well as a remarkable linguistic system. The book contains a survey of today's movement for the promotion of Esperanto as an international language, and a description of the extensive literature in Esperanto, both original and translated. Janton also provides a survey of the other global language projects, explaining why Esperanto has prevailed.

Domenica wanders Europe in a painful attempt to reunite her broken family and come to terms with her past. After ten years, the two women reunite. When Domenica gives birth to a son, Barni, also known as Little Mother, is at her side. Together with the new baby, Domenica and Barni find their Somali roots and start to heal the pain they have suffered in war and exile. This powerful yet tender novel underscores the strength of women, family, and community, and draws on the tenacious yearning for a homeland that has been denied.

"You're mine or you're his. I don't share." Caterina Zanetti has it all: a charmed life in the elegant, residential areas of Rome, a top of the range car, an aristocratic boyfriend and a glorious future as a pampered society housewife. Until her father persuades her to move to the USA and spend her second year of college at UCF in Orlando. In less than twenty-four hours, before she's even got over her jet lag, her whole life is turned upside down. Just one look at her handsome next-door neighbor is all it takes for her to question her perfect, programmed existence. "That's exactly the kind of guy you need to stay away from" her father warns as they get out of the taxi. Yes, because Benjamin Carter looks exactly like the kind of bad boy who makes smart girls do stupid things. Everyone thinks he has it all: women literally fall at his feet, he has the highest grades on his course and he's the singer in one of the most popular college rock bands in the city. Yet something is missing. Someone is missing. Someone who can help him realize that not everything in life is black or white, who'll stand up to him and force him to take off the mask he's been hiding behind all his life. And apparently, that someone has the yellow eyes of a wild cat and a sexy Italian accent that drives him crazy. Will he win the heart of the beautiful foreign student who is intent on keeping him at arm's length or, in the end, his wild, impetuous character will ruin it all? Matching Scars Series: → Choose Me can be read as a stand-alone. The second and the third novels of the Series must

If there were an emergency number for adulthood, Matt Kincaid would have dialed it months ago. Only, this time for a hate crime against a local fight club, where settling debts isn't taken lightly. When the club offers to let Matt risk everything in a long-shot match with a man who's as brutally handsome as he is tough, he jumps at the chance. If Matt wins, all will be forgiven. If not? Well, he might as well move in, because 'The Law' will own his ass...for a very long time. There are no limits to what Lawson 'The Law' Gaumond will do to protect the club he and his former lovers built. An inner-city sanctuary where Anniston Falls' gay leather culture thrives, The Asylum Fight Club isn't an easy place, but it's home. Taking on a local hothead whose younger brother vandalized the space isn't high on his priority list, but there's something about Matt that cries out for a firm hand. Lawson's never backed down from a fight, and he's not about to start when there's no way he can lose. When renewed gang violence erupts, spilling blood over The Asylum, Lawson and Matt must confront their pasts to find a way forward. Gunshots and knives should be harder to survive than this rough love, but coming to the ring armed with nothing but the truth is their greatest challenge of all.

Computers offer new perspectives in the study of language, allowing us to see phenomena that previously remained obscure because of the limitations of our vantage points. It is not uncommon for computers to be likened to the telescope, or microscope, in this respect. In this pioneering computer-assisted study of translation, Dorothy Kenny suggests another image, that of the kaleidoscope: playful changes of perspective using corpus-processing software allow textual patterns to come into focus and then recede again as others take their place. And against the background of repeated patterns in a corpus, creative uses of language gain a particular prominence. In Lexis and Creativity in Translation, Kenny monitors the translation of creative source-text word forms and collocations uncovered in a specially constructed German-English parallel corpus of literary texts. Using an abundance of examples, she reveals evidence of both normalization and ingenious creativity in translation. Her discussion of lexical creativity draws on insights from traditional morphology, structural semantics and, most notably, neo-Firthian corpus linguistics, suggesting that rumours of the demise of linguistics in translation studies are greatly exaggerated. Lexis and Creativity in Translation is essential reading for anyone interested in corpus linguistics and its impact so far on translation studies. The book also offers theoretical and practical guidance for researchers who wish to conduct their own corpus-based investigations of translation. No previous knowledge of German, corpus linguistics or computing is assumed.

This groundbreaking volume critically examines how writers in Japanese-occupied northeast China negotiated political and artistic freedom while engaging their craft amidst an increasing atmosphere of violent conflict and foreign control. The allegedly multi-ethnic utopian new state of Manchukuo (1932–1945) created by supporters of imperial Japan was intended to corral the creative energies of Chinese, Japanese, Koreans, Russians, and Mongols. Yet, the twin poles of utopian promise and resistance to a contested state pulled these intellectuals into competing loyalties, selective engagement, or even exile and death—surpassing neat paradigms of collaboration or resistance. In a semicolony wrapped in the utopian vision of racial inclusion, their literary works articulating national ideals and even the norms of everyday life subtly reflected the complexities and contradictions of the era. Scholars from China, Korea, Japan, and North America investigate cultural production under imperial Japan's occupation of Manchukuo. They reveal how literature and literary production more generally can serve as a penetrating lens into forgotten histories and the lives of ordinary people confronted with difficult political exigencies. Highlights of the text include transnational perspectives by leading researchers in the field and a memoir by one of Manchukuo's last living writers. "This first-rate collection offers the most comprehensive overview of Manchukuo literature in any language. Containing an abundance of very original research and analysis, with relevant references to diverse sources in Chinese, English, Japanese, Korean, and Russian, the essays will be welcomed by scholars dealing with literary, historical, political, and colonization issues in Manchukuo and its neighbors." —Ronald Suleski, Suffolk University, Boston "Manchukuo Perspectives is an excellent contribution to the field. Manchukuo was a fascinating and fraught experiment. Colonialism, imperialism, modernism, and nationalism were just some of the many different forces at play there. With an impressive set of contributors bringing both breadth and depth to the study of these issues, this collection fills a void in our understanding of the cultural and literary production of Manchukuo wonderfully." —James Carter, Saint Joseph's University Using Italian Vocabulary provides the student of Italian with an in-depth, structured approach to the learning of vocabulary. Italian Gothic horror films of the 1970s were influenced by the violent giallo movies and adults-only comics of the era, resulting in a graphic approach to the genre. Stories often featured over-the-top violence and nudity and pushed the limits of what could be shown on the screen. The decade marked the return of specialist directors like Mario Bava, Riccardo Freda and Antonio Margheriti, and the emergence of new talents such as Pupi Avati (The House with the Laughing Windows) and Francesco Barilli (The Perfume of the Lady in Black). The author examines the Italian Gothic horror of the period, providing previously unpublished details and production data taken from official papers, original scripts and interviews with filmmakers, scriptwriters and actors. Quanto dura "per sempre" quando hai solo vent'anni? Quando tutta la tua vita ruota intorno a un'unica persona, cosa succede se la perdi dall'oggi al domani senza una spiegazione, senza nemmeno una parola? Caterina è tornata a Roma, il suo anno di studi in Florida si è concluso e la sua vecchia vita l'attende a braccia aperte. Una vita che le va ormai stretta, in una città che non le appartiene più da troppo tempo. Sono passati due anni da quell'ultima serata passata in riva al mare con Benjamin Carter e, nonostante non abbia mai più avuto sue notizie, il ricordo del ragazzo che ha amato più di se stessa continua a opprimerla. Ricominciare da capo non è semplice ma un cambiamento è d'obbligo. È così che inizia l'avventura di Caterina in Canada: lontana da tutti, lontana dai ricordi e pronta a ricominciare una nuova vita. Conoscere nuove persone, trovare un lavoro, aprire il suo cuore e lasciarsi andare di nuovo all'amore sembra un'impresa impossibile, finché due occhi nocciola impertinenti la stendono al primo sguardo. Mai avrebbe pensato che il suo cuore malconcio avrebbe ricominciato a battere per un altro uomo: eppure eccolo là, Julian Steinfield, elegante, raffinato, maturo; e la desidera più di ogni altra cosa al mondo. Ma quando il passato bussava alla porta e ti piomba addosso come fosse un ciclone impazzito, qual è la cosa giusta da fare? Chiudere la porta senza guardarsi indietro o lasciarsi travolgere dalla sua forza?
