General Data Protection Regulation GDPR is new, EU-wide data protection legislation to replace the current 20-year-old EU data protection laws. It is designed to be "future-proof" against technological developments, and it hopes to harmonize data privacy laws across the EU.

Privacy and data protection. Data protection laws, and increasing regulatory and commercial pressure on the use of information, are vital issues that impact on virtually every organisation. Those that work in or with the public sector also have to grapple with the increasing complexity and burden of freedom of information laws.
