Posted on February 8, 2018 by richardjohnbr. Tithes were traditional payments that entitled the Church to a tenth of people's annual income. Usually the payments were made in kind in the form of crops, wool, milk and other produce, to represent a tenth of the yearly production. After the Reformation, much land passed from the Church to lay owners who inherited entitlement to receive tithes, along with the land.

The idea of giving a tithe, or tenth, of income to support a local priest can be traced back to before the Norman Conquest of 1066 and the word 'tithe' itself is an Old English word. By the twelfth century it had become accepted that tithes should be given to the parish priest; before then, they could be given to any priest.

Tithing is a commandment accepted by various churches in the Latter Day Saint movement in which adherents make willing tithe donations, usually ten percent of their income, to their church. It is based on both the biblical practice of paying tithes and modern revelation given to Joseph Smith and his accepted successors. For many of these churches, the law of tithing replaced or supplemented the law of consecration. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints emphasized tithing in the 1900s a
