Framework For Knowledge Creation - SlideShare

Knowledge Creation The ability to create new knowledge is often at the heart of the organization's competitive advantage. Sometimes this issue is not treated as part of knowledge management since it borders and overlaps with innovation management (Wellman 2009).

The Cycle Of Knowledge Creation The knowledge creation process involves four distinct phases (adapted from Nonaka and Takeuchi). Each phase implies a set of activities to be carried out by the Center. The continuous management of the cycle leads to a "learning spiral" that generates deeper and more powerful levels of knowledge and competence.

For knowledge creation and management to happen the organization has to become knowledge-centric. This is possible by building up an organizational context that assists the swift advancement of new knowledge. This organizational context encompasses the organization's leadership, culture, structure and infrastructure.
