Structured trade and commodity finance is defined as cross-border trade finance in emerging markets where the intention is to get repaid by the liquidation of a flow of commodities. It is an increasingly important area of emerging-markets lending, but its potential pitfalls have given it a poor image among parts of the financial community.

What is structured trade finance? Structured trade finance is a product which is used predominantly in the commodities sector - i.e., traders, producers and processors. Markets within the structured trade finance arena include mining, energy and soft commodities. Borrowers of structured commodity finance are generally less creditworthy, although the end-buyer profile/ spread is very strong.
