A man with a hard luck story and a broken wing is irresistible to a lot of women. Perhaps, it's because we are hard wired to be nurturers and caretakers, or perhaps, the broken wing we see in others is a mirror of our own pain and need for comforting. Not too many people come out of childhood emotionally unscathed.

The Untold Truth of Fixer Upper

To objectify men as "fixer-uppers" and objects of desire is irresponsible at best. The demeaning advice of phony psychologists such as Cooper Lawrence really detracts from the ideas of actual experts. We all know that studies have shown that women can be desensitized to the man-bashing misrepresented as man-fixing in this book.
