The Saffron Trail. The Saffron Trail is a long distance footpath just over 71 miles in length stretching all the way from Southend-on-Sea in the south east of the county to Saffron Walden in the north west. There are some lovely sections along the route including riverside walks, visits to unspoilt villages and historic monuments, strolls through beautiful woodlands in the heart of the urban sprawl, and miles and miles of walking in the wilds of the Essex countryside.

~~The Saffron Trail | TripFiction~~

The introduction to "The Saffron Trail" is brilliant: "Once, there was a girl who loved saffron.....She loved the wave upon wave of soft purple and green in the field, petals delicate as butterfly wings." It presents the spice in its romantic influence throughout the novel. Saffron was what Nell' s mother cultivated in Cornwall.
