If you take good care of your chinchilla, it can live up to 15 years. Unlike some pets that die after some months or years, the chinchilla will give you company for long. Some of the oldest chinchillas go up to 20 years. Since it is friendly, you can create a strong bond of many years.

Most chinchillas will prefer a water bottle over a water dish. Water bottles are less likely to be knocked over and will prevent bedding and hay from getting soggy. Your chinchilla's cage should also have lots and lots of hay. We will talk more about hay when we talk about chinchilla food, but remember: hay is your chin's BFF.

CHINCHILLA AS PET: Everything about chinchilla care guides, Chinchillas can make wonderful pets for the right family. They are smart, inquisitive, and loving animals.

- Make sure your chinchilla has plenty of safe wood to chew on for dental health, many woods are toxic to chinchillas, so be sure to do your research (this goes for the bedding as well - kiln dried pine shavings work great and are inexpensive). Cleaned and baked apple wood is highly recommended for chew toys.

Chinchillas need a good-quality diet meant for chinchillas to stay healthy. Their digestive system is designed for foods very high in fiber, so a good high fiber diet and plenty of grass hay is the cornerstone of a good chinchilla diet. Feeding them an inappropriate diet can cause serious digestive upsets and health problems.

The wild chinchilla is usually some variant of grey in color. However, selective breeding in captivity has produced a wide range of possible colors and fur types in our domestic chinchillas. With proper care and good genetics, chinchillas can live between 10-20 years. Below are some guidelines for basic chinchilla care.

A lone chinchilla requires a great deal of attention and can become very attached to its owner. If you are unable to devote that much time to your pet, it is better to have two chinchillas than one lonely unhappy pet. Two chinchillas can play and interact and not be completely dependent on their owner. Care Sheet

However, chinchillas require special care to maintain their health and happiness. If you plan on adding a chinchilla — or a herd of them — to your household, one of the most important considerations is their habitat.
